

General Ledger Account Coding Standards

Doc ID: SOP-GL-001 | Version: 1.4 | Effective: 2024-01-15 | Category: General Ledger

Purpose

This standard ensures consistent classification of revenue and expense transactions across the portfolio so that financial statements are comparable across properties and periods.

Chart of Accounts Structure

The chart of accounts uses a four-digit numbering scheme grouped by account type. The ranges are:

Range	Account Type	Description
4000 - 4999	Revenue	Rental and ancillary income
5000 - 5999	Expense	Property operating expenses
6000 - 6999	Balance Sheet	Assets and liabilities
7000 - 7999	Equity	Retained earnings and clearing

Key Operating Accounts

GL Account	Name	Typical Use
4000	Base Rent Income	Contractual base rent billed
4010	CAM Recovery Income	Tenant reimbursement of CAM
5000	Repairs & Maintenance	Reactive and routine repairs
5010	Utilities	Electricity, gas, water, sewer
5020	Janitorial & Cleaning	Contract cleaning and supplies
5040	Property Insurance	Property and liability premiums
5050	Property Taxes	Real estate tax assessments
6000	Accounts Payable	Unpaid vendor obligations
6020	Security Deposits Held	Tenant deposits held as liability

Coding Rules

Revenue and expense transactions are recorded through actual AR and AP transactions, not through manual journal entries, except for accruals and reclasses. The post month must match the transaction date so that period reporting is accurate; posting a January invoice into a February post month distorts both months and is not permitted.

Suspense and Clearing

Account 7010 (Suspense / Clearing) is used only as a temporary holding account. No balance should remain in a clearing account at month end. Any residual balance must be investigated and reclassified to its proper account before the period is closed.

CAM-Eligible Expenses

Only expenses in the CAM-eligible accounts may be included in a CAM reconciliation. The CAM-eligible expense accounts are Repairs & Maintenance (5000), Utilities (5010), Janitorial & Cleaning (5020), Landscaping (5030), and Security Services (5070). Property Taxes and Insurance are recovered separately where the lease provides for it and are not part of the standard CAM pool unless the lease states otherwise.